

MÓDULO 9
REFERÊNCIA PRONOMINAL

Questão 01

(ESPCEX 2000) "IT" refers to

Later, men stored salt because they used it as currency, and even later they stored gold, silver and precious stones

- a) currency.
- b) gold.
- c) silver.
- d) precious stones.
- e) salt.

Questão 02

(ESPCEX 2004) "It" refers to:

In China, in the past, only men learned to read and write Chinese. Because of that, scholars are not sure how, or exactly when, women of a fertile valley in the southwestern corner of Hunan province developed their own way to communicate. So, a new language called Nushu was born. It was a delicate, graceful script passed from grandmother to granddaughter, from aunt to niece, from girlfriend to girlfriend - and they never shared it with the men and boys. Chinese scholars believe it is the only one of its kind.

- a) the Chinese woman.
- b) the Chinese way.
- c) Nushu language.
- d) the women's way of life in China.
- e) women of Hunan province.

Questão 03

(ESPCEX 2005) Read the comic strip below. "It" refers to

- a) the sunrise.
- b) a great idea.
- c) the ambulance.
- d) Garfield.
- e) you.

Questão 04

(ESPCEX 2011) The pronoun "it" refers to

Back in June 2009, the globe's potpourri of social-networking sites was extremely diverse: Google's Orkut dominated India and Brazil; Central and South America preferred Hi5; Maktoob was king in the Arab world. The Vietnamese liked Zing, the Czechs loved Lidé, South Koreans surfed Cyworld. Two years after that, and Facebook has stolen users away from its rivals very fast. It's completely knocked Hi5 off the map in former strongholds such as Peru, Mexico, and Thailand. After a tense back-and-forth with Orkut in India, Facebook has emerged victorious. And it's becoming more popular in Armenia, Georgia, and the Netherlands, where local providers are making a desperate last stand.

- a) Orkut.
- b) India.
- c) Armenia.
- d) Hi5.
- e) Facebook.

Questão 05

(ESPCEX 2011) The possessive adjective "their" refers to

An air of calm and relief swept through the neighborhood, as residents opened their windows and began walking the streets.

- a) an air of calm and relief.
- b) neighborhood.
- c) residents.
- d) streets.
- e) calm and relief.

GABARITO
1	2	3	4	5
e	c	a	e	c