London Buses
 Most are red double-deckers. There are two types of stop: compulsory (sign with white background) where all buses indicated will stop without being hailed, unless they are full; request (sign with red background) where buses stop only when you raise your hand allowing the driver to see you well in advance. Fares are according to the distance, which and how many of the fare zones you travel through.

The London Underground
 Also known as the "Tube", this is the fastest way to travel around London, especially over long distances. The Underground Map is designed to indicate clearly which stations allow you to transfer from one line to another. The Underground system is divided into six fare zones, with the city centre being in Zone 1. The price of a ticket depends on how many zones you travel through.

BUS TOURS
 Bus tours run daily at frequent intervals and include live commentary by professional guides or recorded commentary available in several languages. Tickets are valid for 24 hours and allow you to get on and off as often as you like at many different places around central London. You may purchase your ticket on boarding the bus.
 The most popular departure points are: Baker Street Station (C3); Trocadero (F5); Speakers' Corner, Marble Arch (C5); Grosvenor Gardens, Victoria (E8).

RIVER TRIPS
 There are riverboat services operating frequent tourist trips from:
Westminster Pier (G7): Downstream services to the Tower of London, Greenwich and the Thames Flood Barrier (Mar-Nov); Upstream services to Kew Gardens, Richmond and Hampton Court Palace (Apr-Sep). There are also evening cruises at weekends in summer.
Embankment Pier (GH6): Downstream services to the Tower of London, Greenwich and the Thames Barrier.
Tower Pier (M6): Downstream services to Greenwich; Upstream services to Embankment Pier and Westminster Pier.

TEXT 2

I'm not a commitment phobic, I just play one on TV. In real life, there are lots of things I'm committed to. Like, take my health. They say 3 glasses of milk a day give you all the calcium you need. So what do I do? Run away? Make excuses about being too young, not ready? No, I drink it like a real man – straight from the carton.
